Zeke is one of the standout minor characters in Zootopia 2, and fans have been asking the same question since the trailers dropped: who is Zeke, and why is a dik-dik stuck inside a tuba? Here's a complete, spoiler-light breakdown of the character, his role in the film, and the actor behind his voice.

Who Is Zeke in Zootopia 2?

Zeke is a male dik-dik — a small species of antelope — and a minor character introduced in Zootopia 2. He is the only dik-dik to appear in the Zootopia film franchise so far, making him an instantly memorable addition to the movie's massive cast of anthropomorphic animals.

According to the film's own credits, Zeke is officially listed as “Zeke AKA that dik-dik stuck in that tuba” — a tongue-in-cheek nod to the moment that defines his entire role in the story.

What Happens to Zeke in the Movie?

Zeke's big moment comes during the Zootennial parade, a citywide celebration that Zeke is peacefully attending. Chaos breaks out when officers Judy Hopps and Nick Wilde launch a high-speed car chase after suspect Antony Snootley, and the pursuit tears straight through the parade route.

In the middle of the disruption, Zeke ends up trapped inside a tuba. The Zootopia Police Department's “Jumbo Unit” is called in to solve the problem the only way they know how — by blowing him out of the instrument. Zeke shoots out of the tuba and into the air, leading to a chaotic and comedic moment where an EMT otter has to ask who's supposed to catch him on the way down.

It's a brief appearance, but it's become one of the most talked-about comic-relief moments from the sequel's marketing and early reactions.

Who Voices Zeke in Zootopia 2?

Zeke is voiced by Dwayne Johnson, marking another animated role for the actor after voicing Maui in Disney's Moana and Moana 2. Johnson's casting as an “accident-prone dik-dik” caught fans by surprise, given his usual larger-than-life live-action roles in franchises like Fast & Furious and Jumanji.

Outside of Zootopia 2, Johnson's other voice-acting credits include Krypto the Super-Dog in DC League of Super-Pets and Charles T. Baker in Planet 51.
